All Culls of Healing to Have Voice in New Health Center

Home Sought for Movement Founded by Dr. Cowles; Clearing House for Ideas of Every School Will Study Physical, Mental, Social and Spiritual Ills

A movement to found an institution here in which the whole man, with his interlocking physical, mental, social and spiritual problems, may have scientific study and treatment, has reached the stage where a building is about to be bought as a center for this work.

The extent of the organization has not been divulged yet, but Dr. Edward S. Cowles, nerve specialist and superintendent of the Park Avenue Hospital, said yesterday that it will include noted clergymen, physicians, sociologists and psychologists. He is the founder of the movement and his recent appointment to the commission on faith healing, appointed by the Anglican Church in convention at Portland Ore., has given impetus to his activities in this direction. The committee is already at work and expects to complete its plans within two months. Such buildings as the Poly-Clinic Medical School and Hospital are being considered as a possible center for the work, since it is not the intention of the committee to build at present.

Free Search for Truth
The institution, as it is planned, is without precedent. Its doors will be opened to the proponents of all cults, Healers, Christian Scientists, Freudians may bring their patients to this hospital, who conduct research will be in progress. If they have any results to show that are effective the institution will acknowledge and learn by them. In short, its founders want to sift what is true from the current forms of healing, physical, mental and spiritual. There will be no intolerance. As Dr. Cowles explained the project, "The medical and scientific world is required to broaden their views on the subject of healing. Sociologists may be able to correct the environmental conditions which are responsible on the part of patients, an clergyman

Pastors in Verbal Clash Over Film Story of the Bible

Clergymen Disagree With Rabbi Silverman's Opposition to Religious Pictures Being Shown in Theaters

The luncheon of the Theater Owners' Chamber of Commerce yesterday, to discuss a plan of cooperation between motion picture exhibitors and the religious forces of the city, turned out to be a gathering to consider a fifty-two reel film photograph in Palestine to be presented the whole story of the Bible without catering to any creed. It was made to be shown one reel each week for a year.

Some of the clergymen expressed approval after they had adjusted their minds to the new topic, but Rabbi Joseph Silverman said he had understood the plan of cooperation in Palestine to be a gathering to consider a fifty-two reel film photograph in Palestine to be presented the whole story of the Bible without catering to any creed. It was made to be shown one reel each week for a year.

Senator Watson Dies of Asthma At Age of 66

Georgia Politician Passes in Full Vigor After 40 Years as Unique Figure in Affairs of Nation

Virulent Foe of Wilson

Populist Campaigns and Attacks on War Attracted National Attention

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(By The Associated Press).—Another potent and picturesque figure passed from public life in the death to-day of Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia. His death, which occurred at 2:40 a. m., was unexpected, according to physicians resulting from an attack of asthma.

The Senator had been a sufferer for several weeks from the disease, and only last Sunday experienced an acute attack. Two physicians and a nurse were at the bedside when the end came, but the patient's wife, who is in ill health, and other relatives were at the home in Thomson, Ga., for which Mr. Watson had planned to depart to-day for the Congressional recess.

The funeral will be held at Thomson, Ga., either Thursday afternoon or Friday morning. Senate officials are in charge and the funeral party will leave here to-morrow at 3:15 o'clock for Thomson.

Senate flags were ordered placed at half mast for a period of thirty days upon the American military administration in the death of the Senator, and the Senate will adjourn out of respect when it reconvenes. A day also will be set for memorial services. President and Mrs. Harding headed those who proffered condolences.

Parents Slave Owners
"Tom" Watson, as he was popularly called and as he preferred to be known, was the son of John S. and Ann Eliza (Maddox) Watson, and was born in Columbia County, Georgia, September 6, 1856. The attempts of his foes to identify him with the "cracker" or "poor white" class were unfounded, for his parents were wealthy land holders and slave owners.

His Civil War record was not a bare competency, and while the future Senator was yet in his teens the panic of 1873 swept away the remainder of their property.

The boy, then a student in Mercer College, but the change in family fortunes compelled him to leave at the end of the sophomore year. He then supported himself by teaching school while he studied law. At the age of nineteen he was admitted to the bar and began practice at Thomson, a few miles from his birthplace.

Like the eminent Nebraska with whom his political fortunes were destined to be joined and then to clash he came into notice first as a "boy orator." In 1880 he was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention, and his speech against General Colquhoun made him known in every township in the state.

Watson's election to the state House of Representatives followed, and he served in that body in 1882 and 1883. His next official appearance was as a Democratic Presidential elector in 1888, and during the campaign of that year he stumped the state for Cleveland and tariff reform, though he afterward disowned in the strongest possible way from Mr. Cleveland's type of democracy.

Joins Populists
His break from Cleveland Democracy occurred only two years later. The Farmers' Alliance movement then developed great strength in the South and he identified himself with it, and with the Populist party which sprang out of it. His white-hot zeal and passionate oratory made him a leader of its ranks, and in the fall of 1890 he was elected on the Ocala platform Representative in Congress from the 10th Georgia District.

When that Congress met in 1891 Watson refused to enter the Democratic caucus. Instead he allied himself with "Society" Jerry Simpson and other Western Populists, and became himself their candidate for Speaker. This conduct, of course, excluded him from the Democratic party, and he was compelled to seek renomination

AUGUST KNECHT
POTTSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 26.—August Knecht, editor and publisher of "The Miners' Daily Journal" and president of the Schuylkill Trust Company, died to-day after a brief illness. Mr. Knecht had been a candidate for Speaker of the "American Republican," a German language weekly. He was born in Baden, Germany, in 1844, but came to America when a child.

for the next Congress from the Populists. He was defeated.

In 1904 Watson was nominated for the Presidency by the Populists and made a vigorous campaign for the rehabilitation of the party. At the same time he began the publication of "Tom Watson's Magazine" in New York. It was followed in 1905 by "Watson's Jeffersonian" and "The Weekly Jeffersonian." He organized in 1911 the Jeffersonian Publishing Company. Beside his political interests he gave much time to his literary attacks upon the Roman Catholic Church and its prelates, both in his periodicals and in his volume entitled "The Roman Catholic Hierarchy." On account of statements in three chapters of this book he was prosecuted for issuing matter alleged to be obscene, but the bill against him was quashed in 1914.

In the great popular revulsion of 1920 against the Wilson Administration and its policies, Watson was elected United States Senator from Georgia, one of whom Watson, speaking from the stump, said: "If you are for Wilson, vote for Governor Dorsey; if you are against Wilson, vote for me; if you don't know where you stand vote for Hoke Smith."

His most conspicuous performance in the Senate was to make an attack upon the American military administration in France, for barbarous cruelties to soldiers. This led to a prolonged investigation. The charges against the army were not proved, and Watson was generally declared to have been unfounded, though no final disposition has ever yet been made of the matter. As Senator he opposed the confirmation of Mr. Taft as Chief Justice and made some violent attacks upon Secretary Hoover and Attorney General Daugherty. He was a champion of the Ku Klux Klan and in its behalf in the House investigation of its doings.
